PIONEER ELECTRICAL JOURNAL OF AMERICA.

MOST POPULAR OF TECHNICAL PERIODICALS.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD, weekly, is the largest, most handsomely illustrated and widest circulated journal of its kind in the world.

It is ably edited and is noted for popular treatment of subjects in simple and easy language, devoid of technicalities. No other technical journal has as many general readers.

The Electrical World devotes a large part of its space to alternating and multiphased currents—subjects that no student can afford to neglect, and which no other electrical journal in the world treats so fully—while the Weekly Digest of Current Technical Electrical Literature gives a complete resumé of current progress in electrical science and its application both in this country and abroad.

Sample Copies Free. Agents Wanted.

Mitman

H AVE you ever thought how much your personal appearance has to do with your chance of success? First impressions are lasting; correct attire goes a great way toward helping you to make a good impression. One of the most important considerations of every man who would appear well-dressed, are his garments.

In this advertisement we extend an invitation to all—but especially to those who have not, as yet, been converted to the purchase of our made-to-measure garments—to visit our store and give us an opportunity to make your next outfit.

We offer to buyers the choicest selections of the best and most up-to-date fabrics now produced. The exclusiveness of our style and the individuality of design, together with the most select stock and best workmanship, places before the public garments that are unparalleled.

Young man, you can't be too well dressed—there's money in it.

It is dollars saved if you get your clothing made with us.

The University is situated at South Bethlehem, on the Lehigh River, at the junction of the Lehigh Valley, the New Jersey Central, and the Reading (North Pennsylvania) Railroads. New York is ninety-two and Philadelphia fifty-seven miles distant.

Entrance examinations are held at the University in June and September. Arrangements will be made for local examinations at various points in June, with reference to which information will be furnished on application.

It is regarded as highly desirable that the examiners should receive from principals of preparatory schools statements with reference to those whom they send up as candidates for entrance, indicating as clearly and fully as possible, in each case, the teacher's opinion of the candidate's character and scholarship and fitness for entering upon collegiate work; and such statements will receive careful consideration in connection with the results of the entrance examinations.

Clothing ^{AND} Furnishing Goods

FOR MEN AND BOYS, READY-MADE AND MADE TO MEASURE.

In the department for Clothing to order will be found, in addition to a full line of seasonable goods,—all the year round weights in all qualities, with a wide range of price, thereby giving the fullest opportunity for selection.

The particular care exercised by us in the cut, manufacture and novelty of pattern in our Men's Ready-Made Stock, is also extended to our Clothing for Boys and Children, and guarantees exclusive style and the best of value at no higher prices than are frequently asked for garments made in large wholesale lots and of inferior workmanship.

Our Furnishing Goods embrace a most complete assortment of articles in that line for Boys as well as men; Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves, and Neckwear in original shapes and colorings imported by us from leading London manufacturers—also Lounging Jackets, Waterproof Coats, etc.

In this Department we have added a new line of leather and wicker goods, including Luncheon Baskets, Holster Cases, Sheffield Plate Flasks, Riding Whips, Crops, Dog Canes and Golf Sticks.

Catalogue, Samples and Rules for Self-Measurement sent on application.

THE time has come for '97 to make her contribution to the list of annuals which the successive Junior classes of Lehigh have published. After months of patient toil we are at length able to introduce to the University, its friends and patrons, this, the TWENTY-FIRST VOLUME of the EPITOME.

The primary object of the EPITOME is, we believe, not to be a literary work in the fullest sense of the word, but a solid book of reference, which, having been gotten up in attractive form, shall have a lasting value. To the furtherance of this object, we have paid particular attention to the Memorabilia and other Statistics which appear in the volume.

We have especially labored to have the artistic work excel in quality rather than quantity, and have spared no expense in the reproduction of the cuts, especially of the half-tones.

The literary productions have been given the careful consideration which they naturally deserve. In regard to the Gags, Quotations, and other matter of a like nature, it seemed impossible to exclude them, and we would say that they have been written only with the best of feelings, and we hope they will be accepted in like manner.

In conclusion, we would say that especial attention has been paid to the arrangement of fraternity cuts—a feature in former Epitomes that has always been open to much criticism. Great care has also been taken in the elimination of typographical errors, and we trust that they have been reduced to a minimum. With these explanatory remarks, we submit the NINETY-SEVEN EPITOME to your inspection and criticism, trusting that these, our efforts, may meet with favor at your hands.

SENIOR

HISTORY.

JSUPPOSE a history of the Senior year, or rather the duty of the Senior historian, is not so much the record of the doings of his class for the last year of their course as it is a general résumé of their four years' struggles, trials and triumphs for Alma Mater. With this end in view I go back to a certain Wednesday afternoon in the Fall of 1892, when a motley crowd of us stood or lay around on the grass by the Chapel, and waited with throbbing hearts for the signal to enter that sacred edifice officially for the first time in our lives. The class of '95 were also awaiting that same signal, and when it finally pealed out from Packer Hall they assembled in front of the door in a desperate effort to keep us out. I often wonder now why we were so anxious to get in, but we were anxious, and we did get in. During the struggle several panes of stained glass in the inner door were shattered, and how we did enjoy it when, some months afterwards, those same valorous Sophomores came around with a meek and delicately worded request that we kindly assist in paying a little bill that the faculty had sent them for repairs to said doors!

Several weeks afterwards, on Founder's Day, they managed to win two out of the three events; but the struggles were sharp and interesting, and made the Founder's Day sports a fine beginning of what promises to be one of a few original customs. And that reminds me, that '96 has originated not a few customs, and these bid fair to perpetuate her memory here long after her members are dust. We began with reorganizing the Founder's Day sports; then we made the Calculus Cremation a scene of beauty and pleasure instead of the disgraceful orgie that it formally was. We organized the Sophomore Cotillion Club, and practically instituted the honor system at recitation.

We have witnessed many changes and innovations during our stay here; entering under the gruff but just and merciful administration of good old Dr. Lamberton, passing our Sophomore and part of our Junior years under the courteous and venerable Dr. Coppée, finishing the Junior year under the kindly hand of Dr. Chandler, and finally completing our course with the brisk and genial Dr. Drown. We were the last class to finish our mathematical course under Prof. Doolittle; and there is not a man amongst us, who does not cherish deep in his heart, a warm and sincere affection for that tall, dignified figure; a man amongst men—never too busy to spend hours with us over some intricate problem in Analytical Mechanics, or to go patiently over a lengthy paper with some one who did not see how he could have failed to pass, and carefully point out the errors and omissions. The Brown and White was organized during our Sophomore year, and it started out on its successful career with four of our number upon its staff. The new constitution of the Athletic Association was adopted but a short while since; and we have twice seen Lehigh win the inter-collegiate championship and once the amateur, in Lacrosse.

We have sadly dwindled in numbers since our matriculation day. We entered about one hundred and eighty-one—and when the calculus and mechanics re's for '95 were over, we had, if I remember rightly, nearly two hundred and twenty. We scarcely touch the hundred mark now; and there will probably be even less by June. Of those who have left us, two will never more be seen by mortal eyes: Arthur E. Brauenlich and Lewis Benjamin Davenport; and some have drifted away to distant parts of this and other countries, but there are still a few who are with us in spirit, at least; viz., such examples as "Teece" Yates, "Bud" Saltzman and "Kid" Howard being fairly numerous. And we are very proud of some of these lost ones, too. Look at George Rodney; didn't he write a story that actually won a prize, and was printed in a magazine? I am quite sure that there is not much danger of any of the rest of us doing that very soon.

But we are getting near the end of our college days only too fast; a few more weeks, and we pass out into the army of bread-winners, "and the place shall know us no more." Who of us can say where he will be even one year from to-day? But no matter where we may be, there is not one of us who shall not carry away with him the warmest memories of his college days—short, indeed, they seem when we look back upon them, though the brightest in our lives; and may every '96 man be able to say, as well when he completes his mortal as his college days, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

JUNIOR

"And history with all her volumes vast Hath but one page."

AND so it is with the histories of different college classes, that is under-graduate classes. There is a sameness, a repetition in all that the historian usually chronicles, which soon takes a standard, set form of thought and expression.

Every college man knows those few subjects of which the historian treats, every classmate remembers those few events in the history of his class: the first afternoon in September as we lay on the campus, the services in the chapel—the first which we ever attended as full-fledged college men—the rush with the Sophomores, the night of the class supper and the thrilling circumstances attending it, the Freshman class picture, the Founder's Day sports, and then quiet and peace until the rude awakening to the troubles and sorrows of fall and spring examinations.

So the first chapter of a man's college life is passed, and soon the Sophomore year with its nightmare of canes, class suppers, Calculus and Mechanics follows it, and those who have been able to withstand the numerous trials and tribulations, and to weather the storms which send so many good and bad ships to the bottom, find themselves safely anchored in the harbor as Juniors. If we could look beneath the surface, however, we would see a history far more interesting; if we could read the inner history of some of our classmates during their college careers it would prove more interesting, more readable. For it is the individual who makes history ; it is in the individual man that the interesting part of a class's history is written : it is in the moulding and forming of the characters of its members that we find the basis of a class's history.

These characters are determined and shaped usually during the first two years of college life, and it is this character once formed and stamped upon a man that is going to determine his future history—success or failure.

It is interesting to note the different influences which are brought to bear upon a man, and to observe their effects upon him. It is interesting to see how the same experiences will affect different individuals, how some will be raised and strengthened, and others weakened and demoralized by the same influences. Every man is, or should be, at that period of his life, acquiring knowledge and training, doing and entering into everything for the sole purpose and with the one idea of how it is to help him, how it will assist him in acquiring power, power over others,—power to be used in raising himself up, and therefore necessarily pushing others down life's scale. For such is human nature, to rule, to control, to be able to assist and help one's friends, and to be able to use a strong arm against one's enemies and make them feel one's enmity.

It is in thus witnessing the growth or decline of power in a man that we see the elements of the history of a people, or of a class—the future history, for it must be towards the future that the college man turns his face. And in that future it will be the individual that will be historically interesting, not a class history, but an individual history.

Any one who has any curiosity or interest in 'Ninety-Seven's history must look to the future, for the history of the class is mainly concerned with the strength and calibre of the men constituting it, and the value of these men can be known only in the future. What ever may be the result, let us remember at that time, the hour of success—or failure,— all that we have received, and let us not be backward in acknowledging all that we owe to our Alma Mater.

"We know what we are, but we know not what we may be."

Sophomore History.

WHEN the class of '98 entered Lehigh, one hundred and twenty-eight so-called "—freshmen" were borne into the college world. It is not often that one finds quality and quantity so admirably combined as it was found in this class, but here it was, and it only remained to be developed.

The time soon flew past and Founder's Day was upon us. We had been challenged to contest with the Sophomores on that day, and when once more it was ours, we all "whooped her up" for '98.

It was not long afterwards, only a little over a week, when unknown to a single Sophomore, we had our first class banquet at the Hotel Allen.

The remainder of the year quickly rolled by, and with it the June examinations. These proved too much for some of our numbers, but the majority, (98), finally conquered, and came back in September to battle with the deadlier foes, Analytics, Mechanics and Calculus. We have already slain the first, and the second and third will be slain and cremated the coming June.

Upon our return the greatest change wrought was the sight of such a childish set of fellows in our midst. At this time the Skull and Bones (one of Lehigh's chapters) was revived, and never before have so many initiations been made. The difficult duties of the Master of Ceremonies and the Great High Tribune were performed with marked ability. With these children we had very little trouble, their nerve apparently being left at home, but the Fresh. was cunning after all. He had his picture taken, but how did he do it? When the Sophomores were quietly asleep, he stole out on the campus and waited until day-break, and then with less than half the class there, they call this a victory.

Founder's Day came, and our reputation received its first blemish on that day. We won the tug-of-war, and lost the other two events, the football and baseball games.

Our Second Annual Class Supper was a thorough success. It was held at the Sun Inn, March 6th. The toasts and songs were excellent, and the menu,—well, that can speak for itself.

Before concluding something must be said of our athletic ability, of which we are justly proud. On the 'Varsity football team of the season of '94-'95, were six '98 men, on the baseball team, three, and on the lacrosse, one; of the season, '95-'96, the 'Varsity football team had five '98 men, and the baseball and lacrosse teams will undoubtedly have their full quota.

The saddest task of the historian is to record the deaths of two of our classmutes. Chas. H. Becerra died at his home in the United States of Columbia on the ninth of September, 1895.

He played guard on the football team and was actively connected with the athletic management of the University. His character was beyond reproach, and his position in the class, one which all might envy.

Roy L. Evans died at his home in West Bethlehem, Sunday morning, December twenty-nine, 1895. He was a loyal classmate of marked ability, and a true friend to all who knew him. Each held an enviable record while at Lehigh, and by their death, the class loses two of its active workers, and the University two of its promising students.

The achievements of our class are still fresh in the memory of all, and though it is not my duty or privilege to prophesy, I think I am justified in predicting an even more brilliant record in the future.

FRESHMAN

HISTORY.

EVEN in June of 1895, the prospects for a large Freshman class were not very bright, and the results of the examinations did not improve that prospect. Shortly after the arrival in Bethlehem of that class, in early September, small oblong notices were seen posted everywhere. By their color, they appeared to be some advertisements of the Sophomore class, or a Hibernian Society. On Wednesday, September the eighth, College opened. On the campus in front of the Chapel, many students were gathered, most of them familiar with the surroundings and with each other, while the remainder were comparative strangers. There was much jolly good fellowship that day on the campus, as they sat together laughing and talking, yet occasionally from the older groups, some one would whistle an air—a catching little ditty, which when once heard would never be forgotten.

After an address by Dr. Drown, the President, the Freshmen adjourned to the Gymnasium, where their first class meeting was held, and with the assistance of friends of '97, class officers were elected pro-tem, and the Freshmen were informed of the customs of the classes and what was expected of them, and how they must behave like Spartans against the coming attacks of the much more numerous Sophomores. These were waiting for the Freshmen at the gate on New Street, but they were not kept waiting long; down from the gymnasium, in line four abreast, came the Freshmen to meet their opponents, who were divided, some on each side of the gate, expecting the advancing line to pass down by them, when it would be an easy thing to push it down New Street. But in this they were mistaken. The Freshmen line turned to the right, and to the Sophomore's dismay, came towards them. Then came the struggle—the rush between the two lower classes which is considered so amusing by the upper classes. And so it proved in this instance. Both sides did their best to make it as lively as possible. But the battle was not to the strong this time, and there is no doubt but the advantage was with the Freshmen.

One of the Bethlehem papers had the following interesting and veracious account of the rush: "The Sophomores and Freshmen students of Lehigh University engaged in a cane rush, at the corner of New Street and Packer Avenue, at 5 o'clock this evening, and fought along Packer Avenue on the block to Vine Street, and half way down Vine Street to Fourth. At one time the struggling mass surged into the yard of St. Peter's Lutheran Church. A student (possibly a Sophomore) was hurled with such force against a hitching post, that this human being shattered it off at the level of the sidewalk."

It has been the custom for all the classes to endeavor to have their pictures taken on the campus before Founder's Day of their Freshman year. In this the class of '99 did much better than any of the preceding classes. It is always a difficult task to assemble half a class on the campus without attracting the attention of the Sophomores. But early one morning, long before dawn, a majority of the Freshman class with their President, were hidden in the woods back of Packer Hall. With sunrise came the photographer; the class was grouped, four pictures successfully and leisurely taken. Shortly after this, the Sophomores, with unusual sagacity, proceeded to guard the campus.

Founder's Day was approaching rapidly, and with it the usual class games. The prospect of the Freshmen having any chance against the Sophomores was very dark; the former could not spare the time from their studies for practice in the field as the latter did. The baseball team did indeed come out more frequently than any of the other teams. A few days before the games, there were rumors that the Freshmen would have a prospect, as the Sophomores were losing their nerve. But the Sophomores were making great preparations, and when Founder's Day came they showed great skill and taste in the artistic way in which they draped the grand-stand and neighborhood with their colors. At baseball the Freshmen gained a slight advantage, their score being eight to the Sophomores one. This is especially good, as the Freshmen had to contend against the 'Varsity pitcher. At football the Freshmen scored eight, their opponents four, and the former deserve great credit, as they had but a small number of men to pick from, and defeated a team heavier than their own and one that had had more and better practice. The class of '99 had won two events, and only the tug-of-war remained. But the Freshmen could not expect their team to win this, as most of the men on the tug-of-war had played on both the football and baseball teams and were exhausted.

One evening before Thanksgiving there was a dearth of Freshmen in Bethlehem. As there had been several false alarms about their class dinner, the Sophomores gave no heed to their sudden disappearance. But if they had been in Allentown that same evening, they would have been vexed as well as pleased. Vexed because they were out-generalled and not invited, but pleased with the good fare spread out before thirty-five happy Freshmen, and three of their kind friends of '97, in the dining room of Hotel Allen. In this way the class of '99 celebrated most appropriately their victories in the cane rush—the games on Founder's Day and their success of their class picture.

The class is even more successful in the recitation rooms, and manifests the same determination, and its historian hopes that it will continue to cultivate the spirit of unity and perseverance, that will enable it, as the Sophomore class, to push the Freshmen of next year down the hill: as Junior, to extend its kindly help to other Freshmen of 1901, and to be fully equipped as Senior class for that field of battle which is opened when the doors of dear old Lehigh are closed.

UNIVERSITY WEEK, last year, was blessed with the most beautiful weather it has seen for some years, and everything seemed to conspire to make 'Ninety-Five's graduation one of the most memorable that Lehigh has ever witnessed. The festivities commenced with the Senior Banquet, held at the Sun Inn, on Friday evening, June 14. This was followed on Saturday evening by the Calculus Promenade and Cremation by 'Ninety-Seven, which was given on the campus, and was enjoyed by the college men and a host of visitors. On Sunday, the sixteenth, the Rt. Rev. C. Kinloch Nelson, D.D., Bishop of Georgia, delivered the Baccalaureate Sermon in the chapel.

Class Day exercises were held on the campus on Monday afternoon, and a large and brilliant assemblage was present to witness the last class meeting ever held by 'Ninety-Five as under-graduates. In the evening the June Hop was given in the Gymnasium, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, in spite of the excessive heat. Tuesday, the eighteenth, was Alumni Day, and men representing almost every class which has graduated from the University were present at the Alumni meeting and lunch held in the Gymnasium in the morning. Before this, the oratorical contest for the prizes offered by Mr. George W. Childs-Drexel, Mr. Thomas Dolan and Mr. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, took place in the chapel. In the afternoon a baseball game was played by the 'Varsity against a team composed of the Alumni.

On Wednesday, the nineteenth, the University Day exercises were held in the chapel, and the largest class ever graduated from Lehigh received degrees. Bishop Rulison, the President of the Board of Trustees, presented Dr. Thomas M. Drown, and formally installed him as President of the University. This was the final event of University Week, and all who were present at the many exercises will remember it as one of the most enjoyable they have ever spent at Lehigh.

The Sophomore Promenade and Cremation of Calculus.

PROBABLY the oldest custom instituted at Lehigh that has withstood the test of years, is the annual cremation of Calculus during Commencement Week. Other and older customs, which the University has outgrown, have been properly relegated to the past, but the Calculus celebration has been rejuvenated and now stands forth as a social event, the opening festival of University Week.

The decimation which the Sophomore class suffers during the year at the hands of Olney and Courtenay is frightful, and it is only natural that revenge should follow after the class is beyond the thrall of the Math. Fiends. Had these arch-heretics lived during the Dark Ages they would certainly have been among the first to fall under the mighty hand of the Inquisition. The Sophomore class, therefore, is following precedent in summarily disposing of heretical works and their authours.

Olney and Courtenay are tried, found guilty, and condemned to be hanged and burned in effigy in expiation of their enormous crimes. The edict goes forth and the execution is carried on with all the horrible torments peculiar to the Inquisition, while the class dances around the funeral pyre, exhibiting all the symptoms of fiendish delight in the imaginary sufferings of their victims.

The Calculus parade, through the Bethlehems, was always a feature of the celebration up to 1894. It was open to objections, however, in that it attracted undesirable elements to the campus, and in that year 'Ninety-Six substituted for it the Sophomore Promenade—which included the illumination of University Park with myriads of Japanese lanterns—an exchange which has since proven highly satisfactory. 'Ninety-Seven ably seconded the movement last year, and it is hoped that the objectionable parade has gone the way of other customs more honored in the breach than in the observance.

Calculus Celebration of the Class of '97,
Lehigh University Campus, Saturday Evening, June 15, 1895.

SYNOPSIS.

HEN 'Ninety-Seven first entered the portals of this University, it was kept from its rightful place among the mighty by an unlucky stellar combination, and was sentenced to serve the great King Mathematics.

The King being much pleased with the strength and appearance of the class, agreed to restore it to its royal estate on condition that it perform the six great labors which he imposed.

The first task was to exterminate the Theorems, a race of monsters which lived on triangles and parallelopipedons. They were easily disposed of by eating a (spherical) excess of triangles.

The next thing required was to solve correctly four triangles in two hours. When the Oracle was consulted about this he said, "that's easy," and so it proved.

The third labor was to capture a value for π . This timid and elusive creature was sacred to Algebra, and not wishing to injure it the class pursued it for three months and finally snared it with Sturm's Theorem just as it was about to vanish through zero.

The fourth work was to get the girdle of the Analyte Queen of the Asymptotes who lived at Infinity. As this was a rather long journey, the men would have gladly availed themselves of an opportunity to ride. Heretofore many a bold warrior had galloped into the conflict with perfect confidence in his trusty steed. But about this time the Royal Court decreed that hippodrome exhibitions were no longer considered good form. 'Ninety-Seven is very careful about doing the proper thing, so the horses were sent to the rear, and the men trudged bravely along on foot.

The King then commanded the class to bring him some of the golden fruit from the garden of Mecanyr. This garden was surrounded by a high fence of Hood, but while the keepers of the gate were asking foolish questions, some slipped in and stole seven golden apples, which so surprised the guards that they told the Lord High-Keeper-of-the-Marks to let them go.

A fitting end to all these labors was the capture of Calculus. Calculus had charge of the Department of the Infernal. 'Ninety-Seven went far into the interior of his country, then descended into the Lower Regions, where Calculus was found on his throne. The struggle was long and severe, but Calculus was finally captured by the class discovering the secrets to his defenses, formlike A, B, C and D.

When the King heard of the capture of his favorite he was so sore displeased, that he resigned his throne, and did penance by going to the University of Pennsylvania.

When Calculus was brought before the King the class asked—"What shall we do with him?" "Differentiate him," said the King; and immediately Calculus vanished. "What next?" asked the class. "Integrate him," the King replied; and Calculus suddenly reappeared. Again 'Ninety-Seven asked, "Now, what shall we do?" The King thought for a moment. "Disintegrate him," he said; and with a mocking laugh disappeared.

The question now arose how to best carry out the King's command. Some cried execute him, others electrocute him, but many cried, burn him, burn him.

The last method was decided upon as most fitting, and to-night 'Ninety-Seven ends its great labors with the

CREMATION OF CALCULUS.

'97 Cremation Song.

[WORDS BY E. R. HANNUM.]

AIR — O Mother, Dear, Jerusalem.

O Calculus, O Calculus,
Thy awful reign is done.

Our last exam. is past, and now
Our pleasures have begun.

For six long months beneath thy thrall
We've labored, toiled and "bohned;"
Thy cruelty, thy cussedness,
Can never be condoned.

Oft o'er the pages have we pored
And burned the midnight oil,
In learning to construct and solve
Arch'medes' spiral coil.

The Conchoid, cycloid, lemniscate,
Made very pretty curves ;
The formulæ, A, B, C, D,
Completely took our nerves.

Differentiation was quite hard ;
Integration was still worse ;
While quadrature and cubature,
Of our kind was the curse.

Our men from them have suffered much,
And nearly met defeat ;
But on the authors of our ills
Revenge is very sweet.

O Calculus, and thy henchmen,
Olney and Courtenay,
Through many tireless efforts, you
At last we've brought to bay.

Here all of us have come prepared
To torture, hang, cremate,
And now that we are through with you
May Hades be your fate.

Olney, Courtenay, Calculus,
Infamous Trinity,
The limit there is not zero,
It is infinity.

O Calculus, thy reign is o'er.
Our work with thee is done.
The torch to thee has been applied.
Our pleasures have begun. AMEN.

'95 Class Poem.

BY JOHN J. GIBSON.

THERE lies in every human heart
A tender, sympathetic chord,
And not so deep need sink the dart
To sound the music therein stored.

Whose heart has never sung a song
Of joy or sorrow, bathed in tears,
Knows not this life, yet soon or long
He shall be born by force of years.

Could each heart be a harp or lute
Yet ever silent would it be,
Unknown, unheard, for hearts are mute,
For this is God's one cruel decree.

For poor, weak words are awkward slaves
Who try their best to serve, but fail.
One might go shout in empty caves
As well as tell the world his tale.

Nor can we tear our breasts and bare
Our hearts to prove us true and kind.
Though passing crowds might come and stare
What would avail since eyes are blind?

How can we then attempt to tell
The thing our hearts are beating low?
Kind sympathy must cast her spell
Upon us, or no one will know.

Upon Life's slate Time chalks away
His long and strange account with Fate;
One corner holds a century's play,
Yet one day's deeds may fill the slate.

By fits and starts we live our lives,
A weary course we travel long.
We climb a hill, the view revives,
Hope's outstretched hand then makes us strong.

Yet by such milestones on the road
Sits sombre-shrouded Grief in tears.
She lays upon each heart its load
Of love which binds it to past years.

But yet we cannot list to her,
We cannot turn us round and stay.
When sea nymphs call the mariner
He yearns for home but must away.

And there when by her side we rest,
Than Time we set a faster pace.
Emotions' conflict in our breast
Helps age to hurry in the race.

Thus deep and strong we feel this day
As classmates we have reached the brow
Of such a hill, and life's long day
Is brightly dawning for us now.

Before us lies a valley fair,
The landscape we can dimly see,
For Fortune's veil is Fate's great care,
Her smiles and frowns must hidden be.

Behind us memories crowding by
All weave a web about our hearts,
Our well of tears has run quite dry,
We turn and look, the tear stream starts.

We fain would like the ivy cling
Forever here 'round these dear walls,
Yet soon our names will merely bring
An echo sounding through these halls.

Our Alma Mater's lifting hand
We hold and bless in fond adieu.
By her good help we, eager, stand
To start real life and fight it through.

God bless the futures we shall see,
May each man of us ever strive
To make his life an honor be
To Lehigh and to "Ninety-Five."

Athletics.

ESKETCH of athletics at Lehigh would hardly be complete without a short mention of the history and growth of the different branches of sport at this institution. A previous EPITOME treated this subject so thoroughly, however, that we need simply condense and present the main dates and facts.

There can be little doubt but that athletics have engaged attention, to a greater or less extent, from the earliest years of the University's life, but they did not attain any great importance until our present athletic grounds were completed and opened in the fall of 1879, and the gymnasium was built in 1883. These events placed our athletics upon a sounder basis, and constituted the most important step towards our recognition by other colleges in the field of sports. In 1870 Lehigh was admitted into the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association, but the interest which this naturally gained for track athletics gradually decreased; and notwithstanding attempted revivals and booms, this form of sport occupies at present far from a prominent position in Lehigh's athletic circles.

It is a matter of great regret that track athletics, which enjoy so much popularity and prominence in the college athletic world, and which within the year have served to contribute international fame to our American universities and athletic associations, should receive such little interest and attention here at Lehigh. It may be that our baseball, football, and lacrosse absorb all the athletic ability which our comparatively small numbers can produce, and that track athletics may increase in popularity and importance as the University grows older and larger. It is our earnest hope that the next few years will see a track team at Lehigh contributing as much to our reputation as any of our other representative teams in inter-collegiate sports.

Baseball is the oldest of our American games, and there can be no doubt but that it has been played here since the early years of the University. Class, club, and fraternity contests occupied the chief attention and interest until the 'Varsity team was organized in 1875, although our inter-collegiate contests did not begin until 1885. Our early years upon the baseball diamond were not over-successful, but we gradually gained proficiency in this sport, and in 1892 succeeded in winning the State Inter-Collegiate Championship by defeating University of Pennsylvania and Lafayette.

In football our growth has been as gradual, and perhaps as discouraging in its early years as that of our other games. Starting in 1875 with the annual Freshman-Sophomore contests, our skill and strength in football increased until the team of '89 won the championship of the state. Next to the '89 team, that of '93, under the captainship of Ordway, '94, has made the most brilliant showing. During the last two years we have had to cope with great difficulties and numerous setbacks, and therefore have enjoyed but partial success in football. New men have had to be trained every year to fill important positions, with the natural result that our teams have been unable to demonstrate their abilities until late in the season. Last fall Lehigh's light team, though ably trained by Captain Trafton, went down before our rival Lafayette after two hard and well fought games. No excuse can be given except that we were defeated by a larger and superior team. However, these contests served to bring before us most forcibly the necessity of rules governing the eligibility of members of teams in our future contests with Lafayette.

Perhaps our most brilliant record in athletics has been gained upon the lacrosse field. Our 'Varsity team, organized about 1884, was admitted into the Inter-Collegiate Lacrosse Association in 1888, and quickly increased in strength until it won the championship in 1890. Our '93 team carried all before it, and was defeated only by the skilled players from the University of Toronto. This was the second year in which we won the Inter-Collegiate Lacrosse Championship of the United States—narrowly missing it in '94. The championship banner was again won for Lehigh last spring by the team of which Dick, '95, was captain.

Although little interest has been taken here in tennis during the past few years, yet our record since our first college tournament in 1883 has been far from discreditable. In 1884, Lehigh joined the Inter-Collegiate Tennis Association, and in 1886 won the Inter-Collegiate Championship of the State, and also the Championship of the Southern States at the Wilmington tournament. After this Lehigh was represented for several years in the inter-collegiate tournaments held in New England, but the interest in the game here gradually declined, until in 1893 the Tennis Association constructed a number of courts upon the athletic grounds.

With but few exceptions during the past five or ten years, our athletic ventures have resulted financially as failures, with the result that a large debt has been gradually accumulating against the Athletic Association, and has threatened from time to time to engulf it and to eliminate a part, if not all of our inter-collegiate contests. To remedy this evil and to place athletics at Lehigh upon a sound financial basis, the alumni influenced the trustees to take some action in the matter. The result was that all athletic matters at Lehigh were placed under the control and management of the Athletic Committee, which consists of one professor, one instructor, the acting director of the Gymnasium, four alumni, and five under-graduates. This committee exercises supervision and complete control over all the affairs of the Athletic Association, the managers, captains, and members of all teams which represent Lehigh in athletic contests. The beneficial effects of this committee's management have already been plainly apparent.

It would be an injustice just at this period to close a sketch of Lehigh's athletics without mention of Matthew McClung, Jr., '94. No individual has done more to encourage the growth and success of Lehigh's teams, not only by hard, conscientious work while in college, but also, by devoting time and patience to the constant coaching of the teams during the two years succeeding his graduation. For these services, so generously rendered, the college cannot be too grateful.

There is a bright future before Lehigh's athletics however, although the sky may now be darkened by clouds of adversity. With the improvements upon the Athletic field completed, with the certain advance of the University assured by the ability and strength gained in our new President and his contemporaries of the Faculty, we may safely predict the development and rise of Lehigh in the athletic world, until we occupy a position in the front rank of American Universities.

Musical Organizations.

ACK in the 'Seventies, before College Musical Organizations had attained the position they now hold in the social world, Lehigh had its Glee Club. They used to give one or two concerts a year, in old Christmas Hall, but they never dreamed of spreading their fame beyond the borders of the town. Such a project they considered would be worthy of an inmate of Bloomingdale.

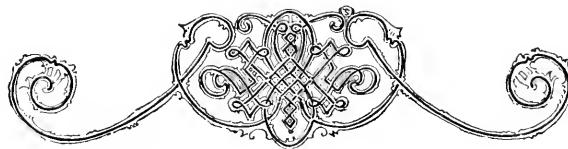

Some few years later a Banjo Club was organized, and then the combined aggregations mustered up enough courage to give concerts in the neighboring towns, provided walking was good.

This state of affairs lasted until 1892, when Mr. C. E. Pettinos took charge of the Banjo Club, and it is due entirely to his work that the Club now stands among the leading college musical organizations in the country. The Glee Club, also, under the directorship of Mr. J. F. Wolle, was brought up to a high degree of efficiency.

Since that time many changes have taken place. New faces have succeeded the old, but the musical clubs still go merrily on under the same efficient directorship. They never change. Graduation or "quituation" affect them not a particle. They remind one of Tennyson's tiresome little brook—no personal application to the music intended. Ever since the days of Orpheus, music has created a sympathetic bond between its lovers and followers. The same thing is as true of the Lehigh University Glee and Banjo Clubs as of Father Orpheus. The crowd always hangs together and has a good time.

The rest of the college guys them and they guy the rest of the college. Belonging to the clubs always provokes a good appetite and an indomitable nerve. There once was a time when college singers were wont to become lonely in an empty house and to lose their nerve. Not so with Lehigh's Indians. The poorer the house, the more fun. The manager always tries to please his company, and so it cannot be wondered at that most of the houses afford "more fun." It always pays to keep the world in a good humor, even at the expense of the exchequer, if there is any.

The clubs, this year, have not given as many concerts as usual. The reason for this course was the financial depression and also the fact that college Glee and Banjo Clubs are being run into the ground. A successful Christmas trip of eight concerts was taken, "Priscilla" was most successfully produced under its auspices, a home concert was given in the fall, and in February, the Minstrel show. There are more worlds to conquer, however. The clubs must not rest. At present, Lehigh occupies a position in the musical world, which many a larger college could envy. All thanks are due the members of the Glee and Banjo Clubs for their efforts, and further success in the future can be most confidently predicted.

NOTE.—In the fall of '94 the Engineering Society determined to publish a technical journal to take the place of the Lehigh Quarterly, the publication of which was suspended earlier in the year, owing to financial difficulties. It was in fact to be a revival of the old Engineering Journal which was published before the Quarterly made its appearance in '91. The new publication was to be called "The Lehigh Engineer," and a board of editors was elected from the Class of '95. But when the board went to consult the faculty in regard to the new journal they encountered some opposition. The faculty refused its sanction unless the board could assure them that the "Engineer" had sufficient income from advertising contracts and subscriptions either to pay off the debt of the "Quarterly" or to insure the payment of all expenses for the entire year. The '95 board were unable to give this assurance and so the matter was allowed to rest for a year. In May, '95, the present board was elected and they set out to accomplish the task bequeathed to them by '95. They never met with much encouragement either from advertisers or alumni, and the publication was laid over for another year. Whether '97 will take up the work and endeavor to publish the journal remains to be seen.

In Spring Time.

WHEN winds of March have rudely blown
The fleecy mantle from Earth's breast,
She shyly dons a robe of flowers
By April's smiles and tears caressed.

Interrupted.

IESTLED on a sofa, in a darkened hall,
With his arms around her—you can guess it all—
Maiden slightly timid, youth a little bold,
Casting siyest glances—story very old—
When the game was over, things were out of place,
Necktie badly rumpled—blushes on her face,
Voices break the silence, footsteps on the stairs,
Sofa they abandon—both in separate chairs.

Extenuation.

HE'S such a coquette,
But her eyes are not brown
Nor her gown violet—
How could I forget
That white was her gown—
Least 't was when we met—
No wonder her frown.

With fear I'm beset
When I think of her frown
And her eyes violet,
So tearfully wet
When I thought they were brown—
'T was her picture I'd met,
So why should she frown ?

A Fin-de-Siecle Toast.

Oh, gay is the dance of the great To-day,
And gay are our hearts as we twirl;
Like moths we must die, like moths let us fly—
A drink to the Up-to-Date Girl!

The Century's end, 'tis a strangely touched age,
When nothing is sure, be it foolish or sage.
The frivolous gaze of the popular eye
Can blast things to earth or raise them on high.

So drink to the last favored one,
To her who has ris'n in the swirl;
We live but a day, are forgotten for aye,—
Come, drink to the Up-to-Date Girl!

Though Fate's name is changed—it is now Fashion's
Whim—
Her love is as fickle, her presence as dim;
Yet still we seek ever the warmth of her eye,
And still when denied it, we pass away, die.

For light is the life of the great To-day,
And light are our hearts in its whirl;
Like moths we must die, like moths let us fly,—
Drink, Drink to the Up-to-Date Girl!

ASKETCH OF OLD BETHLEHEM.

JWAS sitting on one of the inviting benches under the broad elms in the old cemetery near the Moravian High School. It was afternoon. The air had the trembling warmth of May, and the sunshine was playing over everything like a golden flood. On another settee near me was an old white-haired man, evidently out for his "constitutional." He had been sitting very quietly for some time when the bells in the church chimed out the hour and I glanced over at the clock. Seeing me looking that way, he remarked :

"That tower is the most conspicuous object in this part of the valley." I turned and said, "Yes, and it deserves the mark, for it is a fine piece of work, in fact the best in this vicinity, from an architectural standpoint." "I suppose so," replied the old man, "I think it is very stately myself." And then, "Did you ever hear of the—— well, I guess you would call it the tragedy connected with it?" "No," I replied, "I never did, perhaps you will tell it to me." I saw the old gentleman was in a reminiscent mood, and accordingly went over and took a seat near him. This is the story he told :

"It all occurred in 1836. Adolph Schuman was the patriarch of the Moravian musicians. He had been one of their band from the time of his youth, when he had had his little taste of fame from his beautiful cornet playing. He had been one of that group which was the first to stand behind the columnus of the newly finished tower and had played the solemn hymns of thanksgiving and praise. The view from the tower then was vastly different from what it is now. No close-built brick houses, no heavy clouds of smoke met the eye, no roar of machinery and trains assailed the ear in those days. Nature's own calm brooded over all; there was nothing then to mar the beauty of the dawn creeping over South Mountain ; nothing to distract the mind from the quiet harmony of meadows and purling river. Many a morning had Adolph seen the valley by the sun's first beams, and still the poet in him thrilled at the sight. He had grown old, old with the age of men, gazing at the sky and river and mountains, ever changing in their aspect, but ever young with the youth of time. Now it was a burden to him to climb the stairs in the early morn to help announce a happy birth or an equally happy death.

One day he did not rise from his bed when the call came. The news spread that old Adolph was sick, and the Sisters came to his little room to minister to him. Despite all the remedies they knew the fever grew upon him, steadily its strength increased. One afternoon, after he had been ill for some time, a heavy storm came up just before night. The wind made the old elms groan and creak, and lashed the river into white. The rain fell in torrents and the thunder shook the house. He had been delirious all day, but with the coming of the storm he had grown calm and the light had come to his eyes once more. Late in the evening he sank into a restful sleep, and his watcher left him for awhile.

Outside the elements were still at play, and the streaked lightning flashed over mountain and vale. Suddenly, out above the roar of the thunder and the crash of the elms, rose the pure tones of a cornet in a grand and beautiful strain. Clear and strong rolled out the stately, measured air. Soon the men's and women's quarters were all astir, and still the melody swept along the wind. It was soon discovered that the music came from the tower, and at the same time it was learned that old Adolph was missing. A couple of the Brethren hastily ran out. They had just reached the front of their quarters when a particularly vivid flash of lightning revealed the tower and its solitary occupant. There, high above the church-roof they saw old Adolph, half dressed and with nothing to cover his wet, wind-tossed hair, playing as he had so often played. His face was towards the east and his head and body swayed with the music. Then the high, clear notes ceased, and another instant flash showed the tower empty. When the Brethren rushed up to it they found him lying prone on the tower floor with his cornet still in his hand.

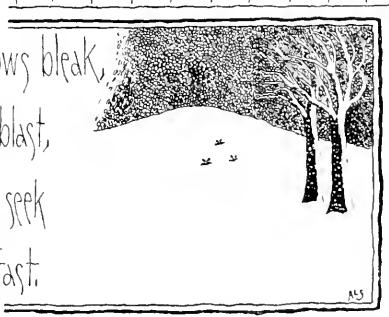

They tenderly carried him down and through the driving gusty rain to his room. But he never breathed again, his life had gone out with those last sweet notes. He had died in the place he loved so well, and nature, with whom he had been so long in touch, had grandly voiced his requiem."

A DAY IN MARCH

The sky is blue, the morn is clear,
The birds are chirping in the trees,
And though the earth as yet is drear
Spring-laden seems the gentle breeze;

How changed ere eve, the sky grows bleak,
The tall trees bend beneath the blast,
The frightened birds their coverts seek
For snow is falling thick and fast.

NS

TO MERL.

DIVINELY TALL,
SWEETLY CHARMING,
EYES THAT FALL,
ALL FEAR DISARMING—

HAIR OF BROWN,
A DARK RICH HUE—
FIT TO CROWN
AN EMPRESS TRUE.

TEETH LIKE PEARLS,
HER CHARMS ENHANCING,
MAKE HER SMILES
SEEM MORE ENTRANCING.

GRAY HER EYES
BEYOND COMPARE—
IN THEM LIES
SWEET DEATH—BEWARE !

THE CASTLE AT SUNSET.

BEHOLD the beauty of yon western wall,
Which now is touched by Sunset's lingering ray—
The turret heights bathed in the crimsoned flood,
The ebbing life-blood of the dying day.

Now deeper yet the ruby-tinted glow,
And redder still the streams of sunset flow
Upon the battlements—although the dying rays
No longer fall upon the walls below.

But look! From crested height the glow has sped,
And wan and cold the mighty towers rise;
A star appears—the turrets fade from sight
Now blending with the darkened eastern skies.

A Dream.

FOR more than an hundred years the Student had been dead. The trailing ivy had grown over his grave, and the hand of time had fallen heavily upon his tombstone, nearly obliterating the record of his many virtues thereon engraved. The Centennial catalogue of the University had come and gone these many years, and still he slumbered. For time hung heavily upon his hands, even as it did when he was wont to take his accustomed nap on the chapel benches of a Sunday morning, or a sonorous snooze in the farthest corner of the "special" car from Allentown, seven nights in the week. At length he awoke, and feeling imbued with life and vigor, as in the times of yore, he thought of his old ideas, of his old ambitions and desires, and he whispered to himself, "I will go to college a second time."

* * * * *

The old town had undergone a wonderful change. New buildings and new scenes appeared on every hand. Strange faces met his gaze wherever he turned. "Alas! have I revived for this? Where have gone the old familiar haunts," he mused sadly to himself, as he gazed up the long vista to the college campus. Slowly and sorrowfully he continued up the hill to the campus gates. Alas, how changed was everything.

The first object that met his startled vision was a splendid building, surrounded on all sides by a wide porch half-enclosed by a sandstone balustrade, and the roof supported by heavy granite columns. On a large marble slab in the wall to the right of the entrance, was inscribed his own name. Amazed at the sight he said to a college man, who was sauntering leisurely along, smoking a pipe, "What does this mean?" The college man replied, "Sir, that man was an Editor of the Burr, and wrote verses which sold at a great price after he was dead, when men recognized his genius. All men delight to honor his memory." And behold! a quatrain he had written was chiseled in the stone steps, while over the doorway was engraved the motto he had chosen for his college career, "Dum Vivimus Vivamus." A large bronze Squirrel, gnawing a chestnut burr, and seated upon a pedestal in the reception hall was visible through the wide open doors, and marks caused by midnight revelry were easily discernible through the windows. The Student smiled and murmured, "If I have lived in vain I do not see it. How much one century can do."

* * * * *

So he became a college man again and lived a full, free life. He renewed his youth at the Burr Club, played pool and billiards as of yore, smoked cigarettes like a Turkish vizier, and blew the froth from many a beer. But when he had done this for four years he found himself in debt, bills weighted down his mail box, and visions of rotund constables played havoc with his slumbers.

Then he sought the Squirrel, the oracle of the club, in his extremity, laid bare the situation before him and said, "What shall I do?" The Squirrel replied, "Have any days of these four years passed over your head without your passing a drink into your face?" The Student answered with despairing gesture but the smile of memory, "No, not one." "And do you play poker, attend all the shows, cut your morning chapel, read Truth, and drink absinthe cock-tails?" This time the Student answered gaily, "All of these things I do, and more." "Then," said the Squirrel, "You may receive $1,000 from the Fund for Careless and Unworthy Students—your own grandson endowed it." The Student smiled.

* * * * *

But now the Student wanted to go into society, so the Squirrel gave him a ticket to a Burr breakfast. He shuddered when he saw the name, for he feared it might be like a "faculty tea." But the Squirrel said, "Go and see." So he plucked up courage and obeyed, and found that one place at least had been left untouched by the ruthless hand of time.

Around the table sat the same girls he had once known, who smiled as they spoke and drank chocolate like fishes. They all knew him and asked in pleasant tones where he had been keeping himself. But he bluffed and said, "In the South African Republic," which they imagined was some place down in Jersey. Then he added in a deprecating tone, "But you are still here?" and they murmured, "Yes, college social existence is a perpetuity, a precious permanence—only the college men change."

Then the Student groaned, "Let me go back to my grave and sleep even to the end of time."

A Riddle.

"A lovely head has this," said Booze
As he swallowed a substance he'd never refuse,
From a vessel he never could take on a cruise
Although as a schooner too often he'd use.

Spring Days.

I LOVE them so,
These days sun=kissed,
Of twilight haze and orient mist,
The valleys, dark with wild=wood's gloom,
The hillsides, sweet with May=buds bloom,
The brooks which ripple as they flow
Past banks where dainty violets grow—
All seem enwrapped in magic spell;
Indeed, no words their charms can tell
I love them so.

I love them so
These halcyon days,
Made musical by song=bird's lays;
Across the hills the breezes blow
And with Aeolian music low
Awake the lute=strings of my heart
Which answer, but cannot impart
Their harmony to other men—
Nor do I wonder at it, when
I love them so.

LEHIGH HOROSCOPES.

[WITH APOLOGIES TO LIFE.]

I.

COL. GA-TH B--NBR-DG- L-T-N :—Was lassoed in “old Kentuck” last fall. The date of his birth is not actually known, but scientists have placed it on Saturday, September 14, 1876, basing their calculations on observations taken upon his teeth. It is believed that he was born while Neptune had the half-nelson on Jupiter, and was looking for a place between Jupiter’s ribs through which to run his frog-sticker.

The Colonel has warlike instincts and carries a four-inch blade to use in defense of his country and himself. In walking he resembles the famous flying wedge more than he does a Dutch wind-mill, but not as much as a runaway clothes-horse. Could easily become a martyr as he loves hardships better than luxury, and had the carpet removed from the floor of his room to remind him that the path to success is not padded, or smooth like our running track. Has a very strong personality, striking appearance, and once seen can never be forgotten. Wears a Grecian nose, slightly aquiline at the base, with the large dilating nostrils of a Kentucky race horse, while his mouth has a lovely green-persimmon pucker. Will receive many overwhelming disappointments during the June examinations.

Would look well draped in leopard skin à la Robert Downing, and wearing Goodyear Rubber Company’s hose, and should cover his floor with carpet tacks to remind him still more vividly that the road to success is not easy for tenderfoots. Would make a good moonshiner, but would succeed best as a perpetual motion man.

II.

COUNT CH-RL-S ALB-RT ANDR-W F-NKH:—Was born at Ausgebegeld, Unzänglichkeit County, near Youkers, New York, while the North star was thrown in the shade by the Aurora Borealis and the Southern Cross was out of sight below the horizon.

He is a naturalized American citizen, having lived in this country ever since his birth. Has in his possession certain papers, including his pedigree and a forged certificate proving him to be a Count. These papers are unnecessary however, for every word he utters is marked with an accent at once striking and Count-like. In spite of the Count's advanced age he will take a course in English grammar and pronunciation at the Webster Public School after his "flunkuation" from Lehigh.

He should be elected captain of next fall's scrub if he is the only person nominated for that place, and should be given any position on the 'Varsity where beef (roast) is the only necessary quality. Would do good work as a train-guard on the New York elevated. Also would succeed as packer of sauer kraut and Limberger cheese. Might make a good Lehigh correspondent to Der Fliegende Blätter. Looks well in smoked glasses and boom-a-laddy ducks with the creases down the seams.

III.

ROB-RT P-RT-RE-LD R-CH-RDS-N:—Was born at Easton, Pennsylvania, while Sirius, Venus, Mercury, and Mars, were playing seven-up on the lid of Job's coffin, Diana with four balls in the rack and two in the pockets, with Neptune playing the round ball in the corner pocket. Mentally, he is in the "freak" class of beings. Took two entrance examinations at once, studies his Dutch lessons, and in lectures takes notes with both hands. Came to Lehigh because he could not find enough work to do at Lafayette, and still complains of not being tired at night. Is fond of surprising his friends, and got his head shaved with a scythe a short time ago.

Physically, he cannot be classified, although he might be given a place on the bench with specimens of prehistoric man. He is double-jointed all over except at the knees, which are ball and socket joints; has pompadour, pig-bristle hair and a beautiful clear complexion like the Missouri river. Is devoted to agriculture and raises moss. Has white eyes with green pupils and eyelids that work on hinges. Keeps himself prepared for a literary drought and carries French-English and English German dictionaries in his hip pockets and an Encyclopædia Britannica in the lining of his coat.

Could never live in a dime museum as the other freaks would kill him for taking all their trade. Would do good work as a dumb waiter, but would make a hit as a ballet girl.

IV.

B-S-I, G--RG- K-djb-n-ff:—Was born in Macedonia while Saturn was frying ham in the summer kitchen of the temple of Juno; Psyche peeling the potatoes with a shoe horn; Venus asleep in the corner and the Gemini driving tacks into her cork leg.

Is a nephew of Hiram Socrates Kodfishballs, a Greek senator. He is a celebrated linguist and speaks thirteen languages and seventeen dialects, including Pennsylvania Dutch and K-djb-n-ff English. Can pronounce any combination of letters at sight, enunciating his own name with little difficulty. A great friend of Weideman and Nicola Tesla; he rendered material assistance to the latter in designing his famous motor, having held the candle one night while Tesla drew a ground plan for his machine. He is not an anarchist, as his name would imply, but has a broad, honest countenance with the map of Greece stamped upon his features.

Would look well in a Nansook toga with divided skirt beneath, carrying a Greek wand in one hand and a "growler" in the other. Would do good work as a stump speaker at political conventions, but would succeed best as a Greek god or bricklayer on the tower of Babel.

V.

R-LP- Sc-F--LD Gr-SW-LD:—Was born in a swamp in New Jersey, while Venus was sitting on Saturn's lap, picking a fever blister given her by Apollo, with one of Psyche's galvanized iron hair pins. Uranus, in his second childhood, tying the dipper to the dog-star's tail.

Is a prominent member of the S. P. C. A. and President of the L. U. C. A. Is very warm hearted and believes that everything has a right to live, and is consequently a vegetarian, eating meats only on Christmas Day, Fourth of July, and Thanksgiving.

Immediately after his graduation the electrical world will be amazed at the number of curious inventions which will originate in his active brain. His most praiseworthy feat in the "lightning business" will be his own accidental electrocution while delivering an experimental lecture on "The Effect of the Electric Current upon the Goat."

Should be very careful of his complexion and should put his face up in mustard plasters at night, never wet his feet, and keep his mouth shut in flytime. Should represent Lehigh at all the agricultural fairs and yellow dog fights in the country.

Looks well in anything, but best in green goggles. The most suitable woods for a frame of his portrait would be sassafras and poison ivy, with split bamboo bars nailed across the front to reassure timid people. Would do good work as a senator from Oklahoma, but would succeed best as a colporteur, Egyptian mummy, or human fly-trap.

The Lesson of the Brook.

THE brooklet sang in April,
The brooklet trilled in May,
And through the golden days of June
We heard its roundelay.
But when the August dog sun
Was scorching up the earth,
The brooklet was athirst and sad,
And ceased its song of mirth.

So in the Spring of life-time,
The soul doth laugh and sing;
But in the heat of passion's strife,
It grows a moody thing.
But ah, the hopeful brooklet,
When came September's rain
Babbled once more its former song,
And laughed at grief again.

The Equation of a Curve.

FOR weeks and weeks my room-mate had been behaving himself most peculiarly. The first thing he did which seemed unnatural, was that he subscribed to a daily paper. That in itself was not remarkable, but when he commenced coming in at eight o'clock every evening to sit at his desk, apparently working at mathematics until twelve or one o'clock, it did look strange, for my room-mate had the reputation of being the laziest man in his class.

He always had a pile of newspapers beside him while he worked and constantly referred to them. My curiosity was aroused. What had the daily papers to do with mathematics? I was puzzled. Of course I wanted to know what he was doing; I ventured to ask him, but he told me he was only making layouts to catch meddlers. I hunted in vain while he was out, for the papers he worked on at night, but they were locked in his drawer.

One night we were together in our room—I was studying and he was working at his mysterious subject.

“I’ve got it!” he cried, and his words were full of exultation.

I looked up from my work and turned my eyes upon him, sitting at his desk. He was almost concealed behind a pile of newspapers, and on the floor around him lay sheets upon sheets of paper, all scribbled.

“Got what?” I asked.

He threw down his pencil and rose from his work.

“Congratulate me,” he said, and at the same time he extended his hand, “Congratulate me—I have discovered the equation of the curve of a stock’s quotation,” and he straightened up proudly to his full height.

I took his hand mechanically. “What do you mean?” I inquired. “Just what I say,” he answered, “I have discovered the law of the curve that represents the behavior of a certain stock. I have plotted a curve which has for its co-ordinates, time and the quotations of this stock, all laid down to scale. It represents the stock for every hour since I have kept account of it. I have made a picture of the stock—a curve representing it. I know its law, its whims, its caprices. I can tell what will be the quotation of this stock at any day in the future.

He paused in his excited account, and looked at me with an expression of happy self satisfaction.

“Nonsense,” I said.

Now at last I knew what had been this absorbing subject that had robbed my room-mate of his time and me of all my scribbling paper. Now I knew why the daily paper was subscribed for. I knew all. "You don't mean to tell me," said I, "that you have been wasting all this time in a wild goose chase! Don't you know that the price of stock is not a function of time—that it is governed, not by any law, but by the existing conditions of the day, and worst of all by the fancy of the few capitalists that hold enough of the stock to control it?"

An expression of disgust spread itself over his features.

"So you're laboring under that absurd idea, are you? Well if you'll come over here I'll show you what I've done."

I followed him to his desk; upon it lay a pad of paper, the sheets of which were fastened so that the whole pad could be drawn out in a continuous sheet; on it there was drawn an unbroken curve, and at regular intervals on a straight line near the foot of the paper, dates were inscribed.

He pointed to it.

"There" he said, "you see the curve and here's its equation. I've just tested that equation for a number of different values of x , the abscissa of the curve; and for each one I get the corresponding ordinate of the curve, the price of the stock for that date."

"That's all very nice on paper," I argued, "but what reason have you to suppose that to-morrow your curve may not take a leap and go off the paper altogether, and leave you and your equation away behind?"

"Well, I've tried it, and more than once predicted the price of stock some days ahead, and hit it every time."

"Nonsense," I laughed.

Then, as he noticed the amused sneer on my face, he added angrily, "It doesn't make any difference to me whether you see the sense in it or not. If you are a narrow-minded fool and can't follow the thread of logical reasoning, it does not hurt me. I don't care a tinker's d—n for your opinion!"

And with a glance of genuine contempt, my room-mate grabbed his hat and went down into the street, probably to see some listener more appreciative and enthusiastic than myself.

Never was conduct more characteristic of anyone than was this of my room-mate. Lazy and happy-go-lucky in routine work, he became the very soul of energy when working on some pet scheme; carried away by his enthusiasm, he perceived nothing but distorted images—distorted along lines favorable to himself. He had the courage of his convictions, too, and dared to support his beliefs with his last farthing, and this added to just a slight love of gambling, had precipitated him into many a financial mire. Only the summer before he had invented a "system" for "playing" the races. "Impossible to lose with it," he told me. However, his experience with this system cost him some eighty dollars in cash and no end of anxiety. Oh yes, he'd back this scheme too, and put every cent he had into Erie & Saint Lawrence stock.

He was coming up stairs now. He had recovered his equanimity when he entered the room, and apologized for having called me a fool. Then he commenced to talk about his miserable equation again. I took the same stand I had taken before, much to his surprise, and lavishly used my eloquence, and exhausted my vocabulary to convince him of the folly of the whole proposition; but he again gave way to the impulsive side of his nature, called me a fool once more, and sought the seclusion of his couch, with the parting wish that my abode in the next world would not have the atmosphere of a refrigerator.

My room-mate was not old for his years. He was nearly twenty-one and his guardian would soon be a man of no importance in his eyes. He would soon be drawing his own checks, and would have to learn the value of money.

* * * * *

Vacation had come and gone and I was back in my room at college. At my feet lay a copy of the Daily Dispatch in which I had just read an account of the failure of the Erie & Saint Lawrence Railway. I looked across the room at my room-mate's desk. No pile of newspapers lay upon it. It was bare. The chair before it was empty. My room-mate—how I missed him!

Alma Mater Song.

WORDS BY J. J. GIBSON.

AIR:—"Amici."

WHERE the Lehigh's rocky rapids
Rush from out the west,
'Mid a grove of spreading chestnuts,
Walls in ivy dressed,
On the breast of old South Mountain,
Reared against the sky,
Stands our noble Alma Mater,
Stands our dear Lehigh.

Like a watchman on the mountain
Stands she grandly bold,
Earth's and Heaven's secrets seeking,
Hoarding them like gold.
All she wrests from Nature's store-house—
Naught escapes her eye—
Gives she gladly to her dear sons,
While we bless Lehigh.

We will ever live to love her,
Live to praise her name,
Live to make our lives add lustre
To her glorious fame.
Let the glad notes wake the echoes,
Joyfully we cry :
Hail to thee, our Alma Mater !
Hail, all hail, Lehigh !

When One's in Love.

When one's in love the world's a blue-eyed maid
With perfect form in queenly gown arrayed,
With fairest face and darkest chestnut hair,
Footsteps so light they seem to tread in air.
One loves to walk with her in leafy shade,
And in one's mind the future's plans are laid—
One thinks in all the world there's none so fair
As the blue-eyed maid—
When one's in love.

One sees not Anna's form, divinely tall,
All other's charms upon his senses pall—
One falls to thinking in a vacant stare
That one—and one—would just make up a pair
For oh! one blue-eyed maid is all in all—
Beyond compare,
When one's in love.

ACROSS THE ROAD.

A CROSS the road a figure trim,
Whose glancing eyes beneath the brim
Of her new Easter hat, invite—
Or seem to, with their roguish light—
To join her in the twilight dim,
Across the road.

His heart beats with a sudden vim
As she throws back a glance at him—
Her eyes exert a subtle might
Across the road.

Oh mocking Fates ! for Fortune grim
Denies this joy with cruel whim—
His face is downcast at the sight,
He finds himself in Byron's plight—
To talk with her he'll have to swim
Across the road.

An April Fool Joke.

SAY, what's the matter with your chum, Jim Carter?" said Lane to me as we were coming home from the Lab. one afternoon, a few days ago, "he was as grouchy as a bear in March, when I saw him this morning."

"So you have noticed it, too," I replied, "I shall have to warn Jim or the whole college will soon be on to his actions, and that is just what he does not want; however, since you have spoken of his grouchiness, I reckon I shall have to tell you, for it's too good a thing to keep to myself, but it's just between you and me, for Carter would never forgive me if he ever found out that I gave the story away."

"Yesterday morning, among Carter's mail was a letter from Cleveland, addressed in a large feminine hand. Carter spotted it immediately, and with a large smile of self-satisfaction, broke the seal and proceeded to peruse the letter. After reading a few lines, however, his smile gradually changed to a scowl, and when he had finished reading it, he took the note in both hands and tore it viciously in two. Having accomplished that deed, he gave vent to his feelings in a string of the choicest "cuss" words he could command. In the evening, when his confidence in himself had returned under the influence of several cold bottles, he told me the cause of his display of violence."

"Well, last week, on the first, he got that white sofa pillow you probably have noticed in the corner of our divan—the one with the violets and true lovers' knots on it, you know. It came in a big box, nicely wrapped up, but no card with it; however, on the outside of the box there was a pastier, half torn off, with "Miss Carleton, 2215 Euclid Ave." written on it, showing conclusively, as Jim thought, whence the pillow came. Now, to get a pillow in leap-year from a young lady with whom he had been so intimate, Jim considered a good sign, so what does he do but sit down and write a most horribly sentimental letter to Miss Carleton, thanking her for the pillow and adding a great deal more "guff" he wouldn't tell me."

"As I told you, he tore the answer up and swore like a trooper. Miss Carleton said that she thanked him for the hint, and would purchase the materials and take the trouble to make him a pillow, but to speak diplomatically, she did not care to renew the 'modus vivendi' of last summer. Jim's cousin had evidently sent the pillow for an April fool gag."

"In his moments of comparative calm, Jim admits it was a good joke on him, but he vows he will get even with his cousin sometime, even if it takes ten years."

FR-DD- B-GG-N :—Was born while Jupiter held a pair of deuces, Saturn with four aces in his hand and one up his sleeve for a kicker, Mars showing Venus how to make smoke come out of his eyes, the Dog-star catching fleas and drowning them in the Dipper.

Despite his athletic figure and robust frame (having a seventeen inch chest measure) he is very highly educated, having taken the degree in his A B C's at Cornell; is prepossessing in appearance, extremely lady-like, and has a strong determination to please everyone.

He is the author of several great literary works, among the best known of which are "My Letter Book" (cost, five cents, price, fifty cents), and a statement of his willingness to sell his bicycle,—the latter was particularly marked by the college men.

He is also an architect of growing reputation; has no fear of death, according to his own statements in the Cornellian, and lives in a house he built for himself. During the rainy weather last fall he made an important discovery—he discovered that his roof leaked in twenty-three places, owing to the shingles being nailed on with the upper end down. He found also, that the wind and rain blew in through the weather boarding of his house, tossed about the blankets on his bed and wet his feet.

He should take a great deal of out-door exercise and diet himself on fruit, dried apples and water to improve his complexion. Would look well in anything, but his most becoming colors are canary yellow and crushed strawberry red. Looks best while riding his wheel. Would do good work as a lion tamer, gladiator, or correspondent for the Ladies' Home Journal.

VII.

MR. W-BB:—This prodigy of electrical knowledge was ushered into the world with general pandemonium reigning in the heavens; the Polar Star and Southern Cross in electrical conjunction and star showers prevalent; the Great Bear trying to swallow Orion's sword after choking on Neptune's hay-fork, the Dog-star gone stark mad chasing the tail of Bieli's comet in mistake for Cassiopeia's pet cat, and Venus making faces at Mars in answer to a proposal of marriage.

Is best known as "Shorty" but has been known to answer to other complimentary names. His diminutive stature is probably due to a too indulgent use of soda-water and sarsaparilla. When a small boy (smaller than he is now) he showed signs of undeveloped greatness and used to draw pictures of lightning-arrestors and dynamos upon his slate before he was old enough to chew tobacco.

Generally wears an expression of pained tolerance upon his countenance, and when walking takes two steps with his left foot to one with his right. For a time was employed by the General Electric Company in the capacity of blue-print boy, but left immediately after his pull expired. He is the only person living who knows what electricity is, and his definition of it is the only one in existence. It is not copyrighted however. While lecturing, suffers from a dearth of ideas and draws pictures on the board to get around the difficulty.

Should stand on a three-foot stool when lecturing, and wear his hair pompadour in order to be seen by the class. Should give up bicycle riding as working the "pushers" does not particularly add to his tout ensemble. Would look well in almost anything but looks best in a hurry when going to dinner. Might make a third-rate telegraph operator if the key and sounder were placed on a chair. Would make a good bell-boy at a seaside resort, but would succeed best as a professional cake-walker.

VIII.

THE RESPECTED MR. C. W. R-TH :—Was born while Neptune was diving for fun at a sea-side resort, and the Great Bear was hugging Venus and another summer girl on the hotel porch. Psyche upstairs, tying her celebrated knots in the comet's tail. He is the great great grandson of Methusaleh and can trace his lineage back to Adam and Eve if necessary. His name is variously corrupted into Rhotes, Rhodes, Roats, etc., but he is most widely known as "the fossil." Was discovered on the site of Packer Hall just before it was built, and could not be awakened, so Packer Hall was built up around him. Has a complexion like a cross-cut saw with a veneering of de Lessep whiskers ; is of dignified bearing and looks like Emperor William without half-trying. Is overjoyed when he can send out faculty notices, and when doing clerical work has a personal error of one hundred per cent. Has an enormous amount of faith and believes implicitly in his own importance. Is endowed with extraordinary independence of mind and spells janitor, j-a-n-a-t-o-r, in spite of the opinions of Webster and Worcester in the matter. He has an amiable countenance and a lovable disposition, but lost his temper and wept like a child on April first, when he became the innocent victim of a cruel April fool plot.

Should try to keep his lines straight when he writes, and cultivate the acquaintance of Webster. Would look well in V neck gown, cut somewhat low in front and filled in with brocaded lace. Should wear a cauliflower pinned on each shoulder, and a bunch of night-blooming Cereus on his bosom. If done in plaster would resemble a Greek god; would look well done in oil, but best done in alcohol with a label on the bottle. If stood on a shelf, would do good work as a relic of antiquity, but if aroused with stimulants, would make a good lady-type-writer, presidential candidate, or milk-maid for goats.

IX.

J-M-S M-V-RS:—Came into this world with great electric displays in the heavens. Rum blossoms on the lower right hand corner of the sun, and carbuncles forming on the face of the moon. All the heavens thrown into convulsions, and the milky way being churned into butter.

He is a lineal descendent of Noah, and claims relationship with Napoleon and George Washington. Has a good-natured expression for college men, and a false-front of dignity for freshmen. Has a high forehead that runs all the way back to his neck, its broad expanse only broken by one oasis of seven hairs—the pride of his life. Is very industrious, and spends a large part of his time parading through the drawing room to keep Juniors from working. The rest of his time he spends in combing his seven hairs, each of which he has named after one of the Seven Sutherland Sisters, and polishing his forehead on his coat sleeve to keep off the flies. Has a very equable temperament, but like the respected Mr. R-th, lost his temper on April first, when the weight of the chapel slips and his troubles became more than he could bear. Should wear a policeman's badge on his left breast, and a horse-pistol stuck in his trouser leg. Would make a good leader for a riot or an Allentown band. Best success in the "side-door" business or as President of the University.

X.

G-RD-N-R B-CK:—Was born while Capricornus was in the barber's chair, Psyche smearing his whiskers with whipped cream from the Dipper; Sagittarius in the back of the shop trying on wigs, and Venus's golden hair hanging down her back.

Of Indian extraction, being the second son of Tom-a-Hawk, first cousin to Chingachook, and second cousin to Uncas. Resembles his father more than his aunts, but strikingly resembles his grandmother who denies the resemblance. He claims he is the last of the Mohicans, and says that Cooper was emitting vocal sounds through his headgear when he assigned that honor to Uncas; he is ready to prove his statements by exhibiting an engraved gold watch given him by Uncas and an engagement ring he intended for Pocohontas before he met Mrs. B-ck.

In the daytime he makes a bluff at cleaning up the campus and nails up orders to keep off the grass, but at night he promenades Indian-file with himself across the same grass, and wears the paths that the college men are accused of making. He loves animals and is devoted to his dog which took the first prize at a sheep show last summer.

B-ck is no longer physically perfect, as in youth ; owing to bronchial trouble his breath comes in short trousers. Moreover, his teeth are like the stars, i. e., they come out at night. He is captain of the awkward squad of campus policemen and will arrest anyone who has no more agility than an ice wagon.

Would look well wearing a gown and mortar board with bow and arrows under his arm, but would look best without gown, his body covered with war paint—legs white, body scarlet, arms brown and white, striped like a barber's pole. Would do good work by standing in front of a cigar store, but would succeed best as a yacht owner, Y. M. C. A. President, or society editor of a New York paper.

XI.

MR. ST--FF-R:—Of Irish extraction, being a lineal descendent of Count von Sauer Kraut—was born in Bethlehem on the twenty-ninth of February, while Venus was looking at her reflection in Mercury and greasing the Gemini's hair with Charlie Welsh's Hair Tonic. He early acquired a taste for literature, and even at the age of two years made valuable clippings from his mother's Bible. He learned to read and write in the University library where he has been seated on his revolving chair for many years, rising only to go to his meals. He can easily be distinguished from his brother by the position of the pimple on his face.

He should never be without clothes while his brother lives with him, and should wear his brother's collars, cuffs, shirts, etc., and put them in his brother's laundry-bag to be washed. He should always refuse to pay bills addressed to Mr. St--ff-r while his brother is alive. He has the advantage of most persons for he can be in two places at once, since he enjoys the privilege of being twins. He should wear box-toed socks,—No. 14's double F to fit his feet, and overshoes for "sloppy weather." He should be presented by the University with an axe and a Maxim Rapid Fire Machine Gun with which to preserve order in the library.

Should Mr. St--ff-r become vexed on reading these lines and allow his fiery Irish temper to get the better of him, he should calm himself and cool down, for, by the gods—by the beard of the prophet—by the bones of the saints—yes, by all that is good and holy, these lines do not apply to him,—but to his brother, Mr. St--ff-r.

Appearances.

WHERE bend the gentle lilies,
Where glorious roses blow,
Along the mossy pathway
'Mid rifts of blossom snow,
Marie strolls in the garden
Sweet sovereign of the place,
A queen among her ladies
Low-bowing to her grace.

But me, slow strolling after
Though I too love the queen,
The flower-eyes watch only
In stern and scornful mien.
They care not for her lover
That, I can plainly see;
But did they—ah, I wonder,
Learn this from dear Marie?

To a Swiss Maiden.

J'VE sought in mountain, field, and dale
Some token of my inmost heart,
I've searched in shops of song and art,
My efforts were of no avail;
Both art and song seemed worn and trite,
And truly wretched was my plight.

But yester morn I found 'mid frost and ice,
'Neath shimmering peaks and skies serene,
Hid bashfully in its patch of green,
A little bunch of Edelweiss.
I plucked it with its message true
And send it from my heart to you.

A Familiar Story.

GENTLEMEN, to-morrow is a holiday, so for your next lesson which will come day after to-morrow, you will take, in the Calculus, pages 1 to 210; review the Analytics and those parts of the Algebra and the plane and spherical Trigonometry which lie within the scope of our course. The subject of cancellation, gentlemen, is very important, so I shall expect you, for the next lesson, also, to be able to cancel all of the factors from any equation. I shall expect you to be able to derive formulas A, B, C, and D, with the changes which I shall ring upon them and also to write them backwards upside down upon the black board from memory, and standing on one leg as I do. By this time you should be able to perform triple and quadruple integrations of any expression in the lesson by inspection, and at the same time holding your breath.

Do not forget the Trigonometry. I may call on some of you to solve a few spherical triangles, and as they are very easy, I will require you to stand on your heads at the blackboard while you solve them, using the chalk with your left hind foot, and working your logarithm books with your hair and extracting roots with your teeth. Your hands will be tied behind your backs. If there is nothing further, the following men will go to the board:—

Overheard in Lab.

NACHOD.—Hmn, learning to solder are you?

GRISWOLD.—Say, you go to thunder will you? there's one thing about it,—what I don't know you can't show me.

NACHOD.—Why, my dear, you're quite mistaken. I can show you everything about it.

Extracts from Our Esteemed Contemporaries.

THE UN-V-RS-TY R-GI-TER.

THE GYMNASIUM

is a handsome and spacious structure, built and equipped with the utmost thoroughness. It is provided with hot and cold water; tub, sponge, and shower baths, and 389 clothes closets. Opportunities for recreation and amusement are provided in the bowling alleys.

EXPENSES.

Materials consumed in the chemical laboratories can be obtained from the University, their value being covered by a deposit made at the opening of that term in which the laboratory work is to be done.

ULR-C-'S PR-P-R-T-RY SCH--L.

On account of the growth of this School we were compelled to find more commodious quarters, and hence removed the School from South Bethlehem to Bethlehem. The present location is in the most beautiful part of the town, and, besides bringing the School within easy reach of all, gives us ample space for school and house. The buildings are surrounded by pleasant playgrounds for out-of-door exercises.

The intercourse between teachers and scholars is social, intending to secure confidence.

While we try to give every possible encouragement to the diligent and orderly, and make due allowance for youthful indiscretions, a scholar with vicious habits, whose example might have a bad influence upon his companions, can not be tolerated in this School.

The Principal feels that it is not only his duty to insist upon his scholars' diligence and good conduct in the school-room, but also to keep himself well informed of their outside associations, and to correct and prohibit evil tendencies; in short, to deal with his scholars as a father would deal with his own sons.

The pupils are taught their duty toward their fellows, and themselves.

The reading of dime novels and other bad literature is prohibited. Such books are invariably burned whenever found.

The Boarding is wholesome and plentiful. There is absolutely no need of boxes containing fruits, confections, etc., from home. These things promote neither the health nor the comfort of the pupils, and therefore will be returned to the parents unopened.

TH- BR-WN AND WH-T-.

AROUND THE CAMPUS.

The grass is green on the campus to-day.

The pump in front of Buck's house is still running.

Little red squirrels were playing about in the trees on the campus this week. White ducks and straw hats have appeared on the campus.

The Boomerang Eating Club had fish-balls for breakfast yesterday afternoon. To-morrow will be a nice day on the campus if it doesn't rain.

COLLEGE NOTES.

The Agricultural Department at Cornell has bought a new strawberry patch. Ground has been broken for Yale's old dormitories, the new ones which were erected in 1854 being inadequate and uncompetent.

Chicago University will graduate in June.

"Ben Bold," three years after his graduation, through Du Maurier's use of it, was composed by Mr. Trilby, University of Pennsylvania, '39.

A Winter Idyl.

TOGETHER they strolled in the winter season,
He wore no coat—he had good reason.
Chattered her teeth in the wintry blast—
"Oh dear, aren't you cold?" she asked.

Did he laugh? well laugh is hardly the word;
His feeling cold! 'twas truly absurd!
"The weather is cold, but I don't mind that,
Observe," said he, "I've a 'stove' in my hat!"

Exchange Column.

It is with extreme reluctance that the EPITOME introduces an Exchange List in its pages; but after repeated urging on the part of those who wish to make use of our large circulation in order to secure the best possible terms of exchange, we yield to the personal requests of those of our patrons whose notices appear below.

We will receive and trans-ship all goods sent in, but will not be responsible for loss of perishable articles in transit. A small storage fee will be charged. In consideration of the wide circulation which our volume enjoys, we have fixed the rates at $1.00 per line per insertion.

WOULD like to exchange two boarders of unsteady habits for two Y. M. C. A. young men who will not cover their walls with obsequious pictures and will "outer" their lights at 9:30 P. M. Will expect them to observe proper decorum at the table, to make mention of food according to its proper nomenclature, and not to decorate the walls with cranberry sauce.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM LANDLADY.

WILL exchange two pet canaries and a Shanty Hill goat for a bottle of witch-hazel, or a tooth-brush with plenty of bristles and not black at the roots. Must be accompanied by certificate of cleanliness from the Board of Health.

B-N-D-CT, '99.

WILL exchange a pair of sugar-tongs and a small cake of soap for a "Life of Napoleon."

L-T-N, '99.

A PAIR of cross-eyed spectacles with isinglass window panes for a pair of bow-legged calipers, or a left-hand monkey-wrench.

H-L-, '97.

FOR SALE: A lacrosse stick by Mr. Smith with a double-twisted gut.

CALL AT THE GYMNASIUM.

HAVING a large assortment of smiles for use on any and every occasion, would like to exchange several dozen for a good hair cut to correspond with the weather.

E-M-NST-N, '98.

I WILL exchange my new book, "Around the Campus in Eighty Days," for back numbers of the "House-Wife" or a copy of "How to Become a Great Electrician.

BR-WN, '97.

A SECOND-HAND set of storm-beaten whiskers for sale at the Weather Bureau.

WILL exchange two red shirts and a macaroon-colored sweater for a pair of No. 24 underalls.

L - V - NGST - N, '97.

WOULD like to exchange a green grass cutter and a pair of swamp moccasins for a set of false teeth. Lower set must have zinc molars.

G - RD - N - R B - CK.

WILL gladly exchange a guitar with two strings and two guitars with one string, and will accept absolutely nothing in return.

M - RSH - LL, '98.

DESIRE very much to exchange a setting-hen and a nest of test-tubes for an alarm clock under some bed-ticking.

M - G - NN - GL -, '98.

WILL gladly exchange or lend for an indefinite length of time, one base-ball nine, all in good playing order. We guarantee all the fielders to be absolutely near-sighted, and the first baseman to have perfect alligator-jaw motion of his hands. Satisfaction guaranteed for all nines who play against them. Cannot expect anything in return, but would be pleased with a copy of "A Lost Art."

LEHIGH UNIVERSITY ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

VILL eggschanche eny uff de pack numpers uff eny uff de liprary mackacines fur lager pier, bretzels, schweitzer cheece, or vun mess uff schnitz und knepp.

MR. ST - RN - R.

WOULD like to exchange a lot of stale jokes, old cuts, and broken-down puns, for horse-pistols, nickel-steel armor-plate, and boxing gloves.

EPITOME BOARD.

To W. G. W.

WILLIE wants one chair —
No other chair will suit him —
Than take the chair he loves so well
He'd rather have you shoot him.

If someone takes poor Willie's chair
Then Willie acts disgraceful,
And sheds a copious flood of tears
Before he feeds his face full.

The Chief of the Campus Police.

I am Chief of the Campus Police,
All twilight promenades now must cease—
I have full authoritee,
Arrest any one I see
For I'm Chief of the Campus Police!

I am Chief of the Campus Police,
My charge is three plunks for release—
When you see me, run away
Or I'll surely make you pay
For I'm Chief of the Campus Police!

I am Chief of the Campus Police,
Appointed to maintain perfect peace—
Lay all the plots you want
For me you cannot daunt
I'm the Chief of the Campus Police !

AROUND THE CAMPUS — THE HEDGE.

FERRIDAY, '96.—"What is this wrought iron boiler made of?"

GUMMERE, '98 (to Lewis, P. G.).—"Did you take a course in Volumetric Blowpiping?"

MR. MEAKER (in Mechanics).—"What is work?"

CLINTON, '97.—"Don't know, sir."

MR. MEAKER.—"Your recitation would seem to indicate that."

FRESHMAN (in chapel, frantically clutching D. W. Wilson, '96, from behind as he rises to leave).—"Say, sit down. Don't you know the Freshmen don't leave until the Seniors have gone."

REID, '99 (after being put off the scrub during lacrosse practice).—"The reason Bartles laid me off tonight was because he saw me smoking a cigarette yesterday."

DR. MACFARLANE (in Dynamos).—"If the armature is wound with holes, how are they insulated?"

BINKLEY, '97.—"By leaving air spaces between."

STOCKETT, '98 (hearing of a man with a wooden leg).—"Was he born that way?"

BUCHER, '98 (in Steam Engine).—"Water in the cylinder is caused by the combustion of steam due to radiation."

WETTLAUFER, '98.—"There's scarlet fever down the street and they have guaranteed the house."

LEE, '97 (about to recite at the board in Machinery of Transmission.)—"Professor, if this work is right, it is right; but if it is not, it is wrong."

BUVINGER, '96 (reading from menu at the banquet of the Engineering Society.)—"Filet de Mignon,—that must mean green peas."

ELLIOTT, '97 (to a friend who has a sore toe.)—"If I had a toe like that, I would take it to a taxidermist."

HESS, '98.—"The gas is compressed, and as the cold source of heat D is applied, there is an isothermal compression."

MR. WILCOX.—"Mr. Stack, tell me something about lead."

STACK, '97.—"Lead is made of zinc and tin."

HORNOR, '99 (reading Osgood's letter from Cuba in the Press.)—"I never knew that U. P. sent her teams to Cuba."

REYNOLDS, '97 (as he gets a difficult problem in math.)—"How the devil will I do it?"

MR. LAMBERT (overhearing the remark.)—"Mr. Reynolds, I advise you to implore aid from the opposite source if you wish to get through."

P. S.—Ten minutes later Straub laughs at the joke.

PAT (MacNull's man.)—"Mr. Webb, Mac's aifter wantin' the solution for the dhry cell."

PALMER, '96 (reading names of men to be measured for the Mustard and Cheese Play.)—"What Pettinos is that?"

HOWELL, '96.—"Charley, of course. Why?"

PALMER.—"I didn't know he played lacrosse."

CLINTON, '97 (in Boilers.)—"Mr. Knox, why don't they make the weakest part of the boiler the strongest?"

DR. MACFARLANE (apologizing to juniors for coming in late the day before.)—"Gentlemen, I came in just after you had escaped."

PRESIDENT HORNER (at Sophomore class meeting after counting the yeas in a standing vote.)—"The motion is lost!"

KNEAS, '98 (suddenly coming back to life.)—"Mr. President, why was that motion lost?"

MR. KNOX (explaining in Steam Engine.)—"Now this is very hard to understand,—in fact, you can't understand it unless you have an extraordinary head. I've never been able to understand it myself."

JENKS, '97 (in Physical Lab.).—"This porous cup is no good, it leaks."

MR. FRYE (to Juniors).—"These orations are to take three minutes for delivery."

DUNC. KENNEDY.—"At what velocity, Mr. Frye?"

CLINTON, '97.—"See here, Hannum, I've been roasted for two years now in those d——d gags, and it ought to be about time to let up on me."

STRAUB, '99 (to Saltzman).—"Say Bud, what kind of a snake is a South American condor?"

PROF. THORNBURG.—"Mr. Enscoe, state some facts relating to the moon."

ENSCOE, '96.—"The moon was seen by the ancients. It is so small because we are so far away."

PENNINGTON, '97.—"Any man who gets in the EPITOME three years straight is a blamed ass."

N. B.—This is Pop's third offence.

LUTEN, '99 (to Prof. Klein).—"Please hold my books while I go in to see the President."

MR. WEBB (to Junior).—"I will post notices, generally beforehand, stating the time when these quizzes will be held."

RAINEY, '99.—"I don't see why the Senior Civils think astronomy is so hard; I never had any trouble with it."

REID, '99 (During Founder's Day football game).—"If the score is tied, will they play a third half?"

HESS, '98 (in Steam Engine).—"The pressure varies with the volume."

LUTEN, '99.—"If this promiscuous cheating in college does not stop, I'll have to leave."

KENNEDY, '97 (working under his usual difficulties in the Lab.).—"Say fellows, how many Centigrade degrees are there in an inch?"

BORHEK, '97 (to Hutchins, '96, in Chemical Lab.).—"Hello, Freshman! did you flunk your chemistry?"

REED, '96.—"Professor, am I excused from alternating currents on an 8-5?"

PROF. MACFARLANE (solemnly).—"Mr. Reed, the days of miracles are past."

MR. WEBB.—"Why is this curve a straight line?"

HAZEL, '98.—"Mr. Knox, please explain that paragraph about the isothermals of steam."

MR. KNOX.—"Why, I have just explained it."

HAZEL.—"Yes, I know, but explain it so that I can understand it."

BARTON, '97.—"Can't see the figure, Mr. Lambert."

MR. LAMBERT.—"It's an infinitesimal triangle, you know."

BROWN, '97 (after seeing his first Lafayette football game).—"The biggest brutes won."

GANNON, '99 (in Drawing Room).—"Say, what's the number of the first plate?"

MR. LAMBERT.—"Mr. Wentling, you may find the mathematical probability of Easter coming on a Sunday."

BALDWIN, '97.—"Mr. Heck, are those wrought iron rails steel?"

HESS, '98 (in Steam Engine).—"The steam than expands adabiatically."

MR. FRYE, '98.—"Is there anybody in this section whose name I have called that is out of it?"

FINKH, '97 (in Strength of Materials).—"Mr. Wilcox, is there a consecrated load on this beam?"

COLLEGE MAN (awaiting an opportunity to speak to Mr. Knox).—"Mr. Knox, are you engaged?"

MR. KNOX (blushing and much embarrassed).—"Oh—ah—yes—no—ah! Do you mean to ask if you can speak to me a moment? Oh! then I'm not engaged."

HAZEL, '98 (in Calculus).—"Mr. Lambert, how do you construct that curve geographically?"

MR. KIEFER (in Geology).—"Mr. Thurston, what strati is found about a coal seam?"

J. W. THURSTON, '96.—"A thin layer of fire-brick."

STOCKETT, '98.—"Did the Junior German Club originate in the Junior German section?"

STRAUB, '99 (after Crescent-Lehigh lacrosse game).—"Say, where is Crescent college, anyway?"

FRESH.—“What nationality is Buck?”

SOPH.—“He’s half Indian and half Egyptian mummy.”

CONVERSE, '99.—“That fellow did not give us a full pound of cheese. Look at those holes in it.”

FRESHMÁN.—“Our logarithmic tables are written in German.”

PADGET, '99.—“Are the numbers in German?”

YORKS, '98 (in Math.).—“Mr. Meaker, will you please explain the cinchoid of Nicodemus?”

J. W. THURSTON, '96 (translating in Plautus: Nunc foris pullabo, meaning now I will knock on the door).—“Now I will buy some poultry in the forum.”

SEABROOK, '97.—“Mr. Webb, do you have the two lightning arrestors in series?”

“PROF.” BIGGIN (to Williams, '96, who is showing a sketch of a cottage).—“That is very good Mr. Williams, but there is something wrong with your top story.”

LEE, '97.—“Mr. Knox, what is the pacific heat of steam?”

BRATTON, '96 (Pres. Y. M. C. A.).—“If the Roentgen rays are a success, dresses will be no protection to women.”

DR. MACFARLANE (to '97 E. E’s.).—“You will be able to understand this symbolic equation with careful meditation and study.”

VOICE IN REAR.—“And prayer.”

WORSTALL, '96 (to Mr. Klinck on a trip to Niagara Falls).—“Have a cigar?”

MR. KLINCK.—“No, thank you, I have one.”

WORSTALL.—“Yes, but this is a good one.”

MR. STAUFFER (to Library kid).—“Run de shtairs upp undt bring me dot boohk mit the tob shelvf off. Qwick!”

COMPULSORY CHAPEL:—

“ Behold, we live through all things, famine, thirst,
Bereavement, pain; all grief and misery
All woe and sorrow; life inflicts its worst
On soul and body,—but we cannot die
Though we be sick, and tired, and faint, and worn,
Lo, all things can be borne.”

UNDERWOOD, '97:—

“ Let your literary compositions be kept from the public eye for nine years at least.”

GRISWOLD, '97:—

“ A great, green, bashful fellow,
The butt of all good-natured fun.”

WORSTALL, '96:—

“ I'll be at charge for a looking-glass, and entertain a score or two of tailors to study fashions to adorn my body.”

WERT, '98:—

“ Hyperion's curls; the front of Sophocles himself.”

SHOWALTER, 96:—

“ Let the world slide, let the world go,
A fig for care and a fig for woe.”

STOCKETT, '98:—

“And I never laugh, and I never smile,
And I never look nor play;
But I sit and croak at a classic joke,
Or grind away all day.”

LARAMY, '96:—

“You little tattlers and those who listen to gossip, by my good will! should all be hanged.”

JOHNSON, '98:—

“Oh rare the headpiece, if but brains were there.”

TREICHLER, '97:—

“‘Tis folly to be wise.”

FEM. SEMS:—

“Winning are their ways.”

“See what a grace is seated in his form.”

W. E. BROWN:—

“He hath a face like a benedict.”

BORHEK, '97:—

“Had young Narcissus seen him where he stood Self-love had never drowned him in the flood.”

KENNEDY, '97:—

“Lo! he cometh forth like a strong man to run a race.”

HOOD, '97:—

“Take her up tenderly,
Handle with care,
Fashioned so slenderly,
Young and so fair.”

LEE, '97:—

“I’m too handsome for a man, I ought to have been born a woman.”

FIENDS:—

“Night after night they sat and bleared their eyes with books.”

S. L. G. KNOX:—

“Why so pale and wan, fond lover? prithee why so pale?

LUTEN, '99:—

“I beg your pardon, but what is this?”

The Brown and White:—

“The paper: faugh! here take this thing away.”

DUFOUR, '96:—)

MORITZ, '98:—)

“This is the long and short of it.”

NACHOD, '97:—

“And ‘tis remarkable that they talk most who have the least to say.”

HOOD, '97:—

“A mighty orator he.”

RANDALL, ex-'97:—

“Oh where, oh where, has our little dog gone?”

'99:—

“We are so fresh, the new mown blades of grass turn pale with envy as we pass.”

BIEBER, '96:—

“Though a barber never yet has mown my chin,
With a great broad sword, I long to begin.”

STRAUB, '99:—

“I must be a very fascinating young man! 'Tis not my fault; the ladies must blame heaven.”

'96:—

“From night till morn
They never cease to blow their horn.”

NACHOD, '97:— }

GRISWOLD, '97:— }

“There's a skirmish of wit between them.”

HAZEL, '98:—

“He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument.”

'97 CLASS MEETINGS:—

“What mighty contests rise from trivial things.”

MERRIMAN, '97:—

“Though vanquished, he could argue still.”

MUSSEY, '96:—

“Fie! what a spendthrift he is—of his tongue.”

HILKIN, '99:—

“The helpless look of blooming infancy.”

HARE, '98:—

“Slim, of poetical constitution.”

SESSER, '96:—

“If cheek were a horse, wouldn't I gallop?”

PENNINGTON, '97:—

“It is not good for man to be alone.”

BARTON, '97 :—

“ My heart is like a lonely bird that sadly sings.”

WOODEN, '98 :—

“ Slow, but God made him so.”

DEGENER, '99 :—

“ Too sweet to worship, too divine to love, I'd be a butterfly.”

FINKH, '97 :—

“ In the wild pomp of German majesty.”

METALLURGY LECTURES :—

“ Half our knowledge we must snatch, not take.”

GASS, '98 :—

“ The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.”

LAB. DEPOSITS :—

“ Though lost to sight
To memory dear.”

SHUMAN, '97 :—

“ A living dead man.”

F. B. BELL, '97 :—

“ I am not only witty in myself, but the cause of wit in others.”

CLINTON, '97 :—)

GRAFF, '96 :—)

“ We have heard the chimes at midnight.”

PIEZ, '99 :—

“ I fain would die a dry death.”

GOOD, '97 :—

"A man I am, crossed with adversity."

GRISWOLD, '97 :—

"I would the gods had made me poetical."

THE "DOMINIE" :—

"And let two cocks beneath his window fight
He'll shut his Bible to enjoy the sight."

SMOOT (Special) :—

"The deed I intend is great,
But what, as yet, I know not."

EVANS, '96 :—

"A locomotive in trousers."

KEEP OFF THE GRASS :—

"At Prexy's signs, let us not scoff,
But try to keep, the terrace off."

PUTNAM, '97 :—

"As quiet as a nun."

H. L. BELL, '97 :—

"Of all good men he makes such game
'Twould make Munchausen blush with shame."

"DIGBY" BELL, '97 :—

"Too fat to be called a student."

J. W. THURSTON, '96 :—

"Dull rogues affect the politician's art,
And learn to nod and smile and shrug with art."

SMOOT (Special):—

“Conceit! Good Heavens! In that he has no peer.”

FORBES, '98:—

“Is man no more than this?”

BRATTON, '96:—

“Whose very looks are prayers.”

MASON, '96:—

“Not dead, but sleeping.”

EATING CLUBS:—

“The same viands served o'er and o'er
The stomach nauseates.”

SEABROOK, '97:—

“With what a graceful tenderness he loves
And breathes the softest and sincerest vows.”

SHEAFFER, '97:—

“Oh sleep! it is a gentle thing
Beloved from pole to pole.”

MORITZ, '98:—

“Of small anatomy and infinite precocity.”

MEGRAW, '97:—

“To hear his girlish voice in laughter ring,
But oh! ye gods! to hear him sing.”

GROSS, '97:—

“As heedless and idle as clouds that rove.”

GUNSOULS, '98:—

“A hard unmeaning face, down which ne'er stole a tear.”

EDMONSTON, '98:—

“Has produced several new grins of his own invention.”

L. W. BALDWIN, '96:—

“He mouths a sentence as curs mouth a bone.”

BENEDICT, '98:—

“What ill wind has blown him hither.”

NACHOD, '97:—

“So gentle, yet so brisk, so wondrous sweet,
So fit to prattle at a lady's feet.”

FINKH, '97:—

“Nature abhors a vacuum, so she fills some heads with sawdust.”

HERSHEY, '98:—

“This ape doth much resemble man
But yet, in sooth, he is not.”

BRADENBAUGH, '99:—

“Hush, little baby, don't you cry.”

YORKS AND MORITZ:—

“Perhaps we'll grow.”

BECERRA, '98:—

“As a Freshman I came full of conceit,
As a Sophomore I stay to sleep and to eat.”

MOUNT, '97 :—

“Those who in quarrels interpose, must often wipe a bloody nose.”

LORD, '96 :—

“She knows her man and when you rant and swear,
Can draw you to her with a single hair.”

BAYARD, '96 :—

“Alas, poor chin, many a wart is richer.”

KLINE, '96 :—

“His tawny beard was the equal grace,
Both of his wisdom and his face.”

WHITE, '97 :—

“A gentleman that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.”

HORNER, '98 :—

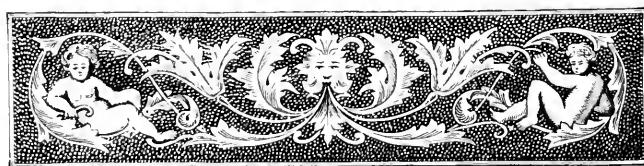

“The foremost man of all the world.”

MEGRAN, '97 :—

“I hold you as a thing enskied and sainted.”

GAGS :—

“Loves Labour Lost.”

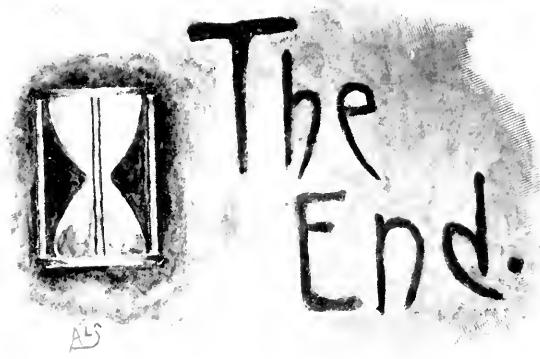

Acknowledgments.

The "Epitome" Board wish to tender due sincere thanks to those who have assisted them in any way in the preparation of this volume—whether by individual work, literary or artistic, or by useful hints and practical suggestions. Particularly we wish to acknowledge our obligations to Frederick A. Daboll, '96, Davis S. Williams, '96, James B. Given, '96, and Charles S. Padgett, '99, who, by their individual work, have helped us materially in our labors.
